

Ridgeway Community Church of the Brethren

Harrisburg, Pennsylvania

Selected by Ridgeway Community Church of the Brethren, Kaylor Architects was commissioned to assist the church in creating a new main entrance that was both inviting and welcoming and that would serve to improve both pedestrian and vehicular circulation. Resurrecting a spire concept that was proposed as part of the building's original design, it was relocated to create a dramatic focal point on axis with the new canopy, vestibule and spacious gathering area. MEP Consultant Michael L. Norris Associates of State College provided dramatic exterior lighting to accentuate the spires unique layered cross design. The light filled gathering area allows for improved fellowship, access to new church offices and a separate and secure access to the fellowship hall. A choir rehearsal room, accessible lavatory, and a baptismal changing room complete the addition.
